Heriots etc 1500 – 1560

Heriots were fines paid by heirs when taking over their predecessors' property. Usually but not exclusively these were father to son successions. This makes them a useful source of genealogical material for a period beyond the span of parish registers as well as a useful source for local history in general.

The Northern Genealogist magazine, published around the turn of the $C20^{th}$, started extracting "heriots, &c." from the Wakefield manorial rolls for publication. The intention seems to have been to publish material from 1401 to 1560. All of it was said to be ready for publication which started with the period 1500 - 1560. Publication of the earlier material started in volume 6. Unfortunately with the death of the editor publication ceased so that all that exists of the $C15^{th}$ is the material from that volume covering 1401 - 1427 and the year 1500 which is strictly speaking the last year of the $C15^{th}$. In line with the original 1500 is included with the $C16^{th}$.

The material published in the Northern Genealogist includes all parts of the manor identified only by graveship. The extracts here are all from the graveship of Holme which extended beyond Holmfirth. In some cases the location of the property is identified by township. Heriots would normally be paid on inheritance by the lord's tenants. This implies that only manorial tenants should appear here; tenants could and did sublet their holdings so they comprised only a part of the population of the manor. The "&c." part of the remit might include those who were not manorial tenants although there are likely to be very few mentioned who were not. Also, in some cases the tenant might reside outside the graveship or even outside the manor; the Dearnleys who lived in Glossop are amongst these.

There are a few instances where a two generation family tree is shown. In order to reproduce these as text the parents are shown on one line with an equals sign and the children listed on the line below. Apart from one comment added here about the printed version all other parenthetic notes are from the original publication.
